Julie Baliva is a psychic medium with more than 40 years of experience. In this recession she says clients are more focused on finances than anything else.

"It's not necessarily are they losing their jobs, they're all terrified they are going to lose it," said Baliva. So they come to her for guidance. "I try to tell people don't be the person who waits until the job is over and it's the end. Let's take some action first and get you right into a job somewhere so there is not down time or time for you to worry about things," said Baliva.

It's not just that people are concerned with financial issues when they come to psychics. It's actually been a boom in business, with these turbulent times more and more people are turning to psychics for advice.

"My business has always been prosperous unfortunately it's busier when there are times of crisis. It's simply the way it works," said Baliva.

recently, "Success, my job, how well I'm going to do in the future," said Klaum.

Klaum hopes future visits won't focus so much on finances.

"I think if the economy's better, everybody's lives improve a little bit more and the outlook might be better as far as what I might find out," he said.

In the meantime a shaky economy means more concerned customers for psychics like Baliva.

"I give people the faith in knowing that this is going to be very short term. That this isn't something you need to go into a major panic," she said.
